Young photographers show work at D&R Greenway gallery

The D&R Greenway Land Trust is hosting the Young Audiences of New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania's 2013 Ennis Beley Photography exhibition, "The Cartography of Self," through Aug. 8 in its Olivia Rainbow Student Gallery.

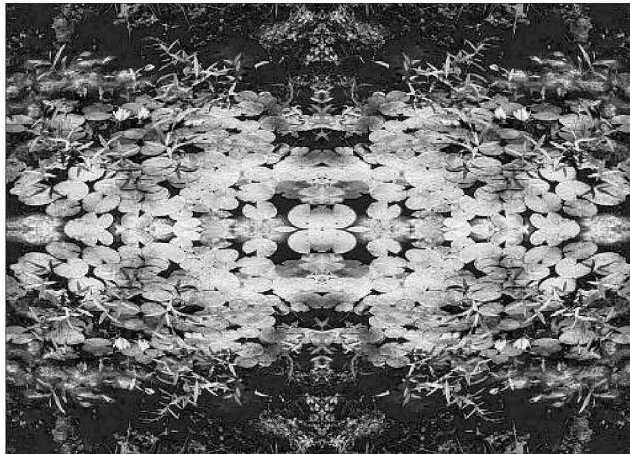

Each year, Trenton-area students create works through this Young Audiences project, the Lawrenceville School and HomeFront, a nonprofit organization serving Mercer County families. The students study with fine art photographer William Vandever, who shares his skills in a multi-week intensive workshop.

Featured photographers in this year's exhibit include Akeeta Harris, Tammara Harris, Angel Conde, Iyandra Wright, Nicholas Hazell, Mikel Sharp, Danielle Rhodes, Francheska Cruz-Millette and Jorge Conde.

The exhibition honors Ennis Beley, an African-American photographer, who was gunned down in Los Angeles gang violence before his 15th birthday.

The gallery is in the D&R Greenway Land Trust's Johnson Education Center at One Preservation Place, Princeton.

The center is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, but visitors should call ahead to make sure all galleries are open for viewing. For information, call (609) 924-4646 or go to drgreenway.org.

Francheska Craig-Millette's "Lily Pad" is part of the Young Audiences of New Jersey & Eastern Pennsylvania's 2013 Ennis Beley Photography exhibition, "The Cartography of Self," at the D&R Greenway Land Trust.
